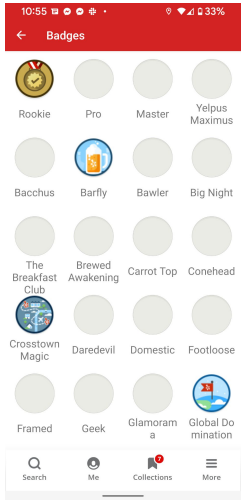
Background

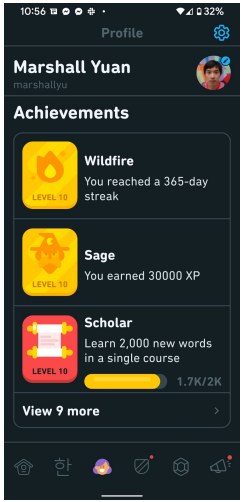
What we want badge experience to be on Yelp

What we don't want



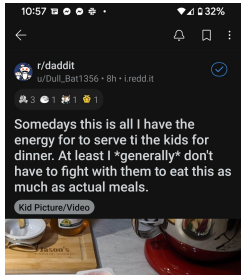
Legacy Yelp Badges

- Tied to only check-ins
- Very old code, hard to develop on



Duolingo Achievements

- Got me to onboard
- No repeatability once attained



Reddit Awards

- User-to-user
- Personalized
- Can be clique-y

What we want

1. Repeatable and progressive - not a one-time event, goes deeper as you put more into it
2. Empowers the reviewer - reviewer has control over what/how they get recognition
3. Inspires FOMO for other reviewers
4. Increases reader trust for the content
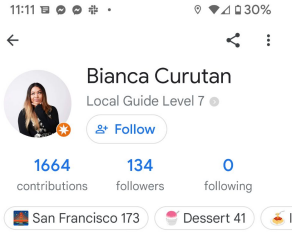
5. Democratized - discourage influencer "king-making" or insular elite-to-elite-only mechanics



Google Local Guide

- Clear goals to attain
- Recognition of specialties

MVP

This is the first of series of tests we will do around badges. This first test is to see contributors are motivated to contribute more if given recognition around specific area of interest. The next tests will be around how to display badges and whether or not progression motivates contributors.

Hypothesis: Giving recognition to repeat reviewers for their contributions in a specific/topic area will motivate them to contribute more

Primary goal: motivate repeat reviewers to write another review

Secondary goal: establish awareness of recognition badges

How would it work?

1. Find interesting topics where there is already upsize of reviewers with multiple reviews
    a. We have top 46 sub RFN categories with highest # of repeat reviewers (~500K users who wrote min 2 reviews of same sub category in the last year)
2. Let reviewer know an additional review will get them recognized as a expert/specialist in the topic. There are 2 ways we will communicate this to the reviewer:
    a. Post review page after user writes their 2nd review of a biz of the same biz category
    b. Push message (in-app modal if unsubscribed to pushes) for those who already wrote 2 reviews of bizzes of same category
3. Reward reviewer with expert recognition badge
    a. Post review page after 3rd review of biz of same biz category
    b. Badge/congrats message in notification history page of app (for MVP we will not display badge in separate section yet)

Doesn't look like much when you walk past, but I was practically dying of hunger so I popped in. The definition of a hole-in-the-wall. I got the regular hamburger and wow... there are no words. A classic burger done right.

All the tacos were super moist and flavourful. The Tinga de Pollo and Carnitas were a little messier than I expected, but no biggie. The Lengua taco was on another level -- the meat was well marinated, tender and the whole thing went great with some extra habanero salsa. I haven't eaten any sort of tongue meat since I moved away from home, so it also served as a nice reminder for me to call my mom.

Proposed Design

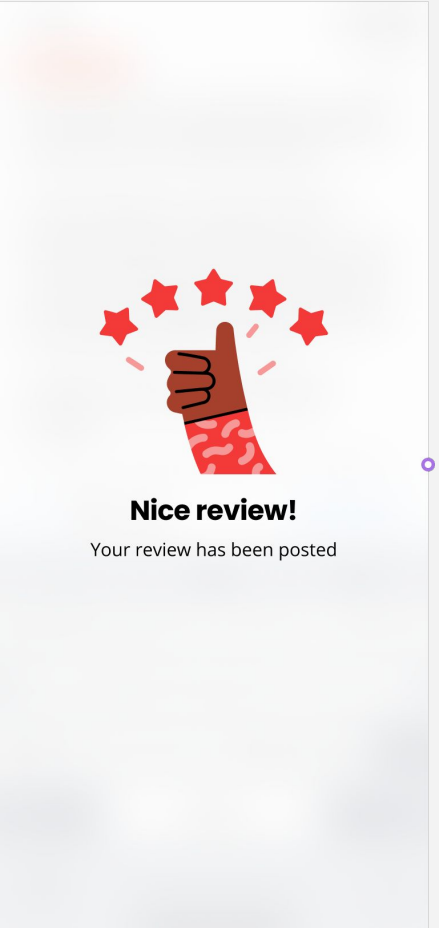
When user writes 2nd review in a category...

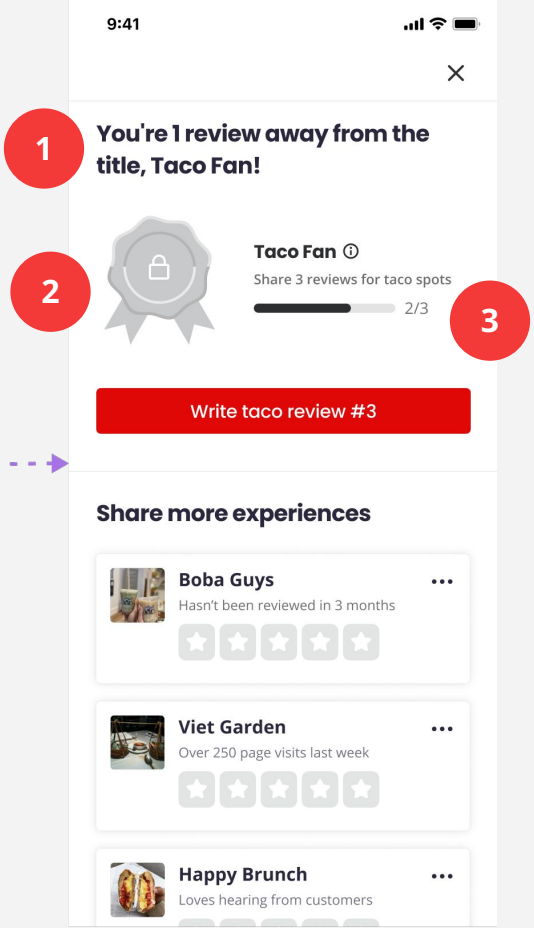
After user submits their 2nd review in a particular RFN, user will be informed about the upcoming accomplishment

1. Header copy: Messaging that the user is only 1 review away from earning “[Category] Fan” status

2. We’ll show a locked badging visual to entice users to “unlock” the title.

3. We will display a progress bar to visually indicate that the user has successfully shared 2 out of 3 reviews within the category and 1 more review to write in order to meet the requirement.





Tapping CTA brings users to the business search screen so that they can write their 3rd review

When user taps on the CTA, they will land on the *business search page and they will be able to find the next review to write.

Caveat - Why *biz search page?: We acknowledge that showing a list of [Taco] businesses would provide more seamless experience instead of letting users find the category-specific business manually. However, after consulting with Eng team, we decided to show the business search screen to optimize the eng scope for MVP. Instead, we came up with more explicit CTA copy that has the category name in the button, so that the required action is clear before they land on the search screen.

Keeping the bottom YNRA section consistent as Status Quo

“Share more experience” section will stay consistent with the Status Quo experience to ensure the users can still write their reviews in various categories as desired.

Tapping on (i) icon will open an educational modal

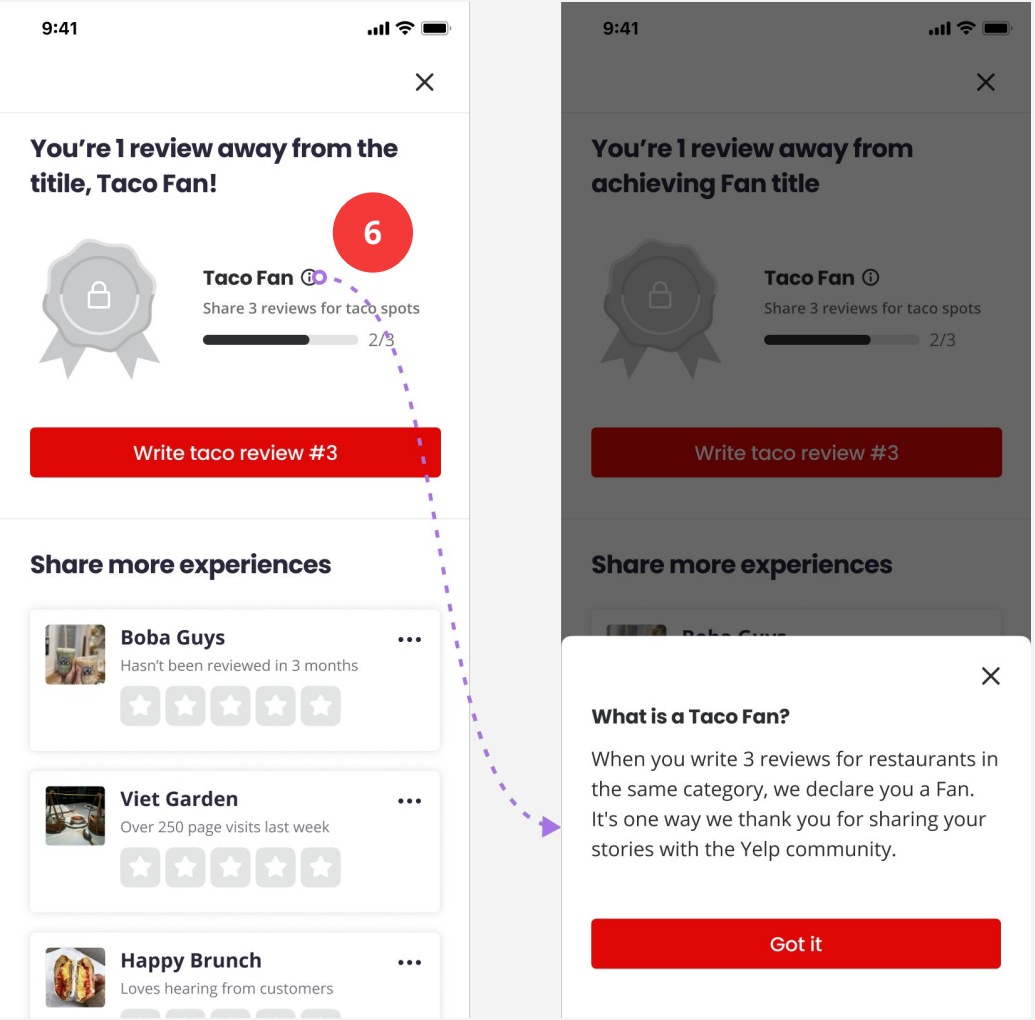
When user taps on the (i) icon, an educational modal opens up to provide more information to users on what "[Category] Fan" means.



The message about them earning an accomplishment will also live in the notifications page

We'll display the consistent messaging regarding users getting close to earning an accomplishment in the notification history page along with the locked badge visual as well as the CTA to write the 3rd review. (Which will also bring them to the business search screen)

If user has push on and previously wrote 2 reviews in one category...

1 If user has push setting on and wrote 2 reviews in a particular RFN category, they will see a push notification:
Cohort 1: "Don't miss out. Earn the title of Taco Fan. Add 1 more review to your 2 existing Taco reviews to unlock"

Cohort 2: "We see you, Taco Fan. Write 1 more review to receive the honor of being called a Taco Fan"

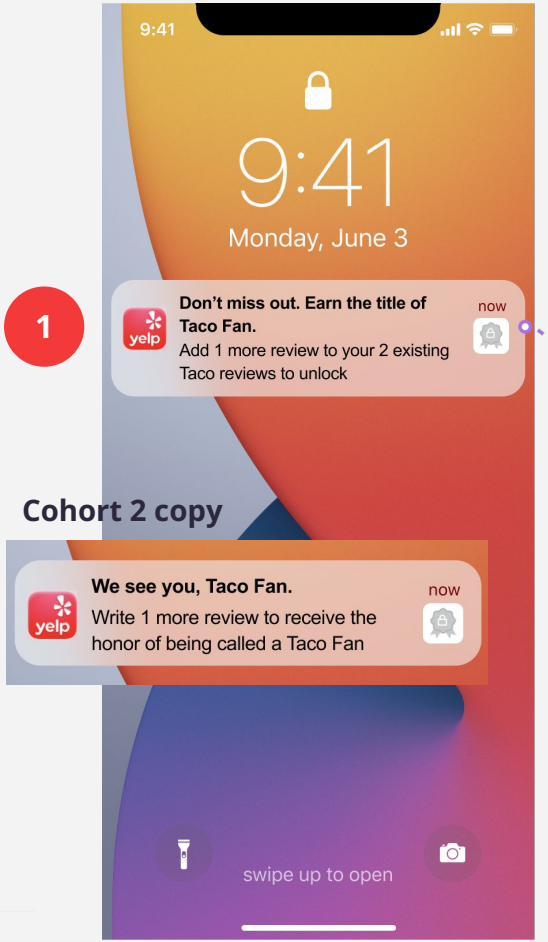
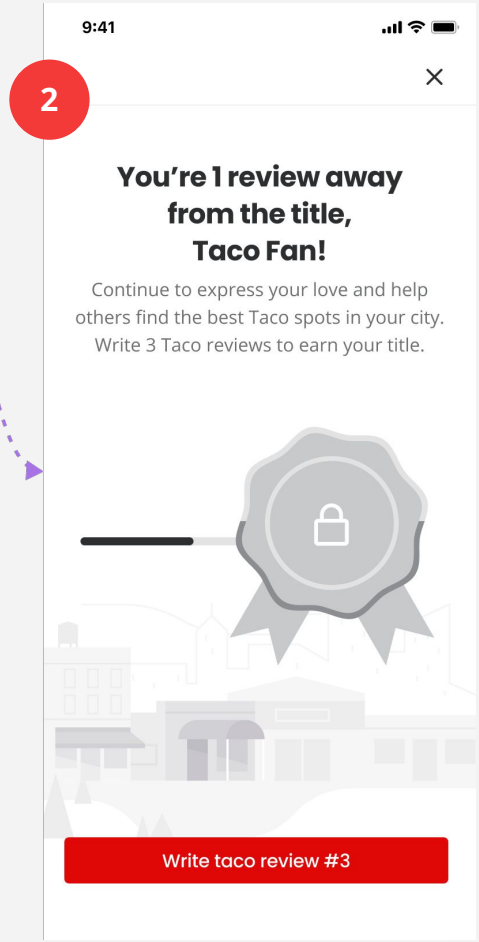
2 When user taps on the push notification, they will see a full modal with a locked badge visual and a CTA to write their 3rd review in the category.





If user has push off and previously wrote 2 reviews in one category...

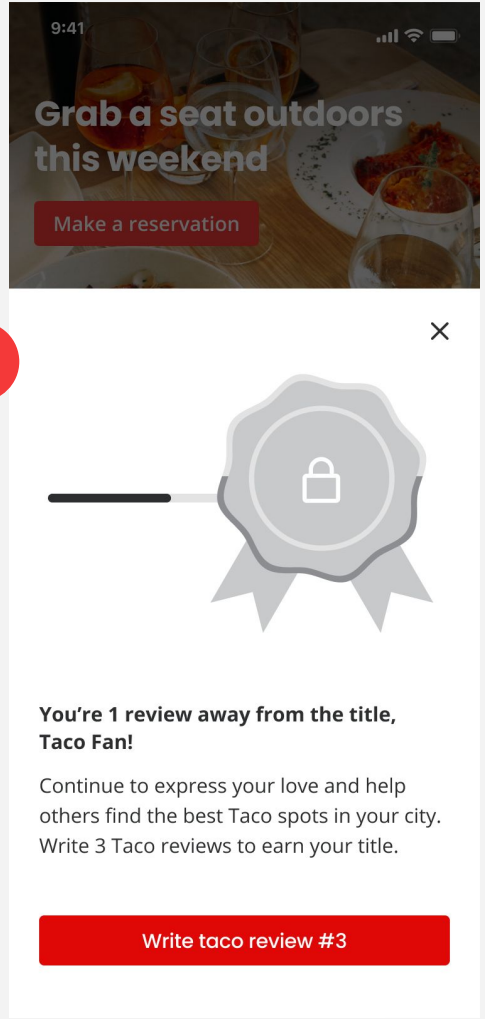
If user has push off, they will see an in-app modal instead of full modal for the less intrusive experience.



When user writes their 3rd review in a category...

User will see a success screen with “It’s official! You’re a Taco Fan.”

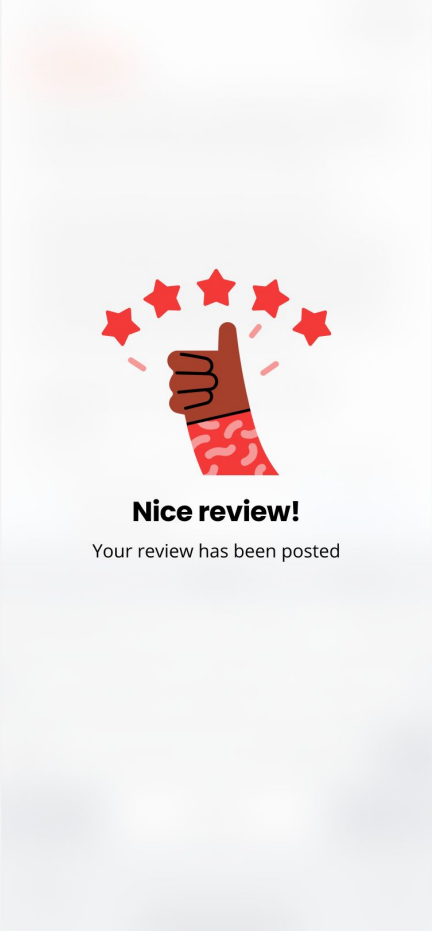
Upon submission of their 3rd review in a particular RFN category, user will get a success screen letting them know that they’ve earned the Taco Fan title.

Status Quo - Success screen



New - Success screen

Once the success screen auto-dismisses, users will see the post review screen as well as a new notification

1. On the post-review screen, the unlocked badging visual will be displayed. Also, the user will see the updated progress bar where it shows that they have successfully met the requirement of sharing 3 reviews within the RFN category.

2. The user will also able to see the accomplishment in the notification history.

Caveat - Why not Me Tab?*: Although we acknowledge that showing the accomplishments in Me Tab might make sense in a long term, we decided to wait until we get the learnings of this experiment before we make the final decision on where this should live in-app.

Other badging visuals explored

Other badging design explored - visual metaphor

We've gone through multiple ideations and iterations to land on our final mvp badging visual. Here are some other explorations that we've explored.

Shield
We've explored a shield metaphor as a common "badge" shape. We decided not to pursue this direction since it can be a confusing signifier with "trust" or "security".

Heart
We've also tried out a heart shape in case we go with "[Category] Lover" term. However, since we're already using hearts for other various features like Yelp Preferences, we decided to move away from using a heart for the expert recognition.

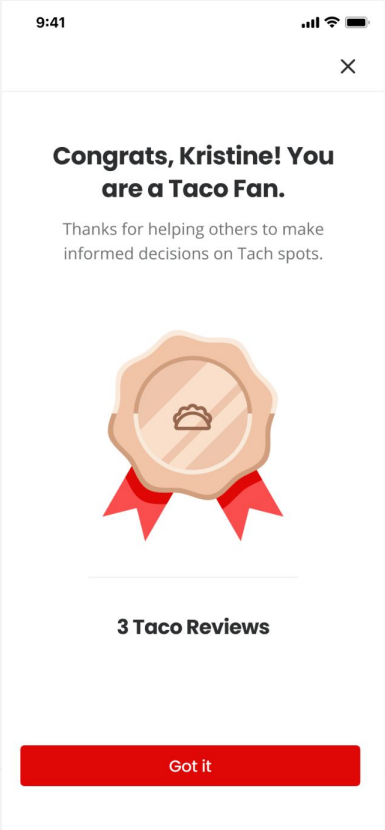
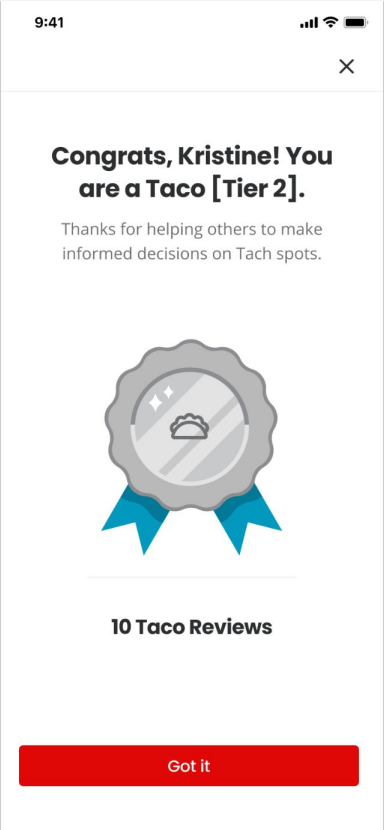
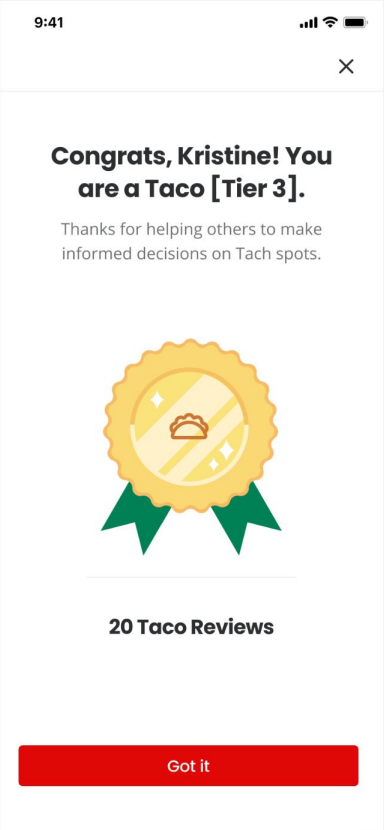
Medallion (Selected Direction)
We've decided to go with the Medallion metaphor since we felt that it's generic enough to be suitable for MVP and it works well as a unique visual metaphor on Yelp. After making rounds of refinements on the visual details, we landed on the final visual which was portrayed earlier in the deck.

The long-term vision

The long-term vision

We've also thought about how this MVP badging visual can be scalable and buildable for future tiering concept.






Caveat*: The design is not meant to be final, but to convey our potential future concept.
